SUPERFORTS RACE TOWARD WASHINGTON

APPOINTMENT OF PATTERSON IS WELL RECEIVED

Capital Praises Naming Of Undersecretary To Top War Position

TWO PARTIES CONTINUE

Early Approval Of Seventh Cabinet Change Made By Truman Seen

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Capitol hill resounded today with praise for the appointment of Robert P. Patterson as secretary of war and predictions of his speedy confirmation by the senate.

The 54-year-old Patterson, who had served as undersecretary of war since June of 1940, was named by President Truman late yesterday to succeed aging Henry L. Stimson as secretary in the first step in the long-expected shakeup in the war department and army high command.

Patterson, like Stimson, is a Republican. His choice made it clear that Mr. Truman would retain a cabinet with a two-party flavor at least through the principal stage of the difficult reconversion and demobilization period.

Chairman Elbert Thomas, D. Utah, said his senate military affairs committee would consider the nomination next Tuesday. He expected speedy approval.

Sensors Voice Praise
Senators of both major parties lauded Patterson's elevation to the cabinet post. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley said it was an admirable appointment.

"He has rendered a great service and has the administrative qualities to carry on the work to the finish in the matter of demobilization and readjustment."

Sen. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, said Patterson's appointment was "logical."

"His years of administration as undersecretary have given him an insight into the problems of the department that few other men have."

Stimson Work Lauded
It was widely acknowledged here that Stimson, who will be 78 years old on Friday, had steered the war department through the best conducted war in American history. There has been a notable lack of scandal or profiteering, a tribute both to the retiring secretary and to the manner in which Patterson, as undersecretary, headed the great procurement program.

Patterson is an able lawyer and a specialist in contract termination, one of the big jobs remaining with the war department.

Other changes in top war department personnel are expected to come in the near future. Assistant Secretaries John J. McCloy and Robert Lovett have submitted their resignations to President Truman but they have not yet been accepted.

Other Changes Due
Changes also are expected in the military hierarchy. There have (Continued on Page Two)

HIROHITO FATE UP TO M'ARTHUR

Congressmen To Ask Allied Leader For Advice On Criminal Action

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Congressmen today sought Gen. Douglas MacArthur's advice on whether Emperor Hirohito should be tried as a war criminal.

Sens. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, D. Wyo., and Styles Bridges, R. N. H., members of the senate military affairs committee which shall consider legislation demanding prosecution of the emperor, said they will make no decision before hearing from MacArthur.

"I'm inclined to leave it up to General MacArthur," Bridges said. "He's handling the situation in Japan very efficiently and very thoroughly."

O'Mahoney termed the Allies' job in Japan "one of pacification and reform" and said he thought MacArthur "knows more about the Oriental problem than any other person."

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D. Ga., introduced the joint resolution whereby the house and senate would declare it "the policy of the United States to try Hirohito, emperor of Japan, as a war criminal."

Chairman Elbert Thomas, D. Utah, of the military affairs committee said such action would be "perfectly in keeping with the sentiments" of Allied peoples but warned that there are many complications. (Continued on Page Two)

HOME IS SOUGHT FOR HOPELESSLY CRIPPLED BOYS

SALISBURY, N. C., Sept. 19—The local welfare board sought an institution today that would take the three teen-aged sons of Mrs. E. D. Pinion, all helplessly crippled and doomed to die by muscular dystrophy.

The oldest of the boys is 19-year-old David Pinion, who hasn't walked in 11 years and who knows that he will probably die within a year. The others know that they will soon die too, as the disease withers their bodies.

Billy, 15, hasn't walked in five years, and Lloyd, 12, took his last step two years ago. They huddle together now in a dismal little room, trying to keep each other company.

Baby Boom Slows Down At Present

COLUMBUS, Sept. 19—The baby boom that put Ohio in a two-year dizzy spin has slowed down momentarily, leaving doctors and nurses and manufacturers of baby goods, to say nothing of the fathers and mothers, gasping for breath.

Ohio hit its peak in 1942 when 143,610 walloping war babies were born. The birth rate race galloped on in 1943 when 143,094 babies appeared, but in 1944 it slowed down to 132,531 babies.

The current year may prove yet to be a big-business year, though, figures for the first six months total 72,298 babies. But first unofficial reports for July and August revealed a sharp fall in the birth rate.

Two world wars in 25 years have given the lie to the age-old theory that war brings a jump in boy reproduction and multiple births. The war has punched the theory full of holes for percentage of male to female births has held to percentage levels nor has there been any percentage increase in twins, triplets and quadruplets.

During the war, maternity hospitals were geared to full production but fewer births were reported by midwives than during peacetime days.

Midwives complained that hospitalization and planned babies were ruining their business while war-time wages made it possible for more people to have their babies under expert medical care.

Only a few Ohio hospitals "booked" maternity cases during the war, though many of them had to cut the lying-in period from two weeks down to as little as seven days. But the hospitals did not shoo their patients out until the doctor gave his approval.

LONDON, Sept. 19—William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce was convicted of high treason against Britain in Old Bailey today and sentenced to death on the gallows.

Conferences Scheduled To Settle Troubles Which Delay Reconversion

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Armed with more authority than any predecessor, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwollenbach today tackled the job of bringing peace on the nation's troubled labor front.

Simultaneously, responsibility for the nation's stabilization program shifted from William H. Davis, director of the office of economic stabilization, to Reconversion Director John W. Snyder. President Truman transferred OES to Snyder in a surprise move late yesterday.

In his long-awaited reorganization of government labor services, Mr. Truman gave Schwollenbach authority over the War Labor Board and War Manpower Commission as well as a voice in making the wage stabilization policies under Snyder.

Akron Rubber Makers Return To Jobs; 83,000 Auto Employees Idle

By United Press
With peace still in its first month, strikes and shutdowns kept nearly 200,000 American workers away from their jobs today. Eighty-three thousand were idle in Detroit, scene of automotive workers' fight for higher wages.

Demand for a 30 per cent increase—52 hours' wartime pay for a 40-hour reconversion week—brought a rash of strikes in the nation's oil refineries.

Members of the CIO oil workers union struck at plants in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and West Virginia and promised to completely halt production in the vital Calumet industrial area near Chicago by the weekend.

STEEL COMPANY DENIES EXCESS PROFITS CHARGE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The United States Steel corp. denied today that it had taken more than $2,000,000,000 in open and hidden profits from war contracts as asserted by President Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers (CIO).

Murray, who also heads the entire CIO, made the assertion in support of the steel union's contention that the steel industry is able to pay a $2-a-day wage increase without a price increase. The new wage demand will be served on the industry at Pittsburgh next Tuesday.

E. M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee of the corporation, said in a statement that Murray's charge and the USW-CIO pamphlet dealing with steel profits "ignores the facts."

"There were no concealed profits," he said. "As far as U. S. Steel is concerned, its total earnings for the five year period 1940-44 inclusive were $413,000,000, or an annual average income of 4.8 per cent of its investments."

CONSUMERS MAY GET MORE SOAP

Easing Of Fat Shortage Is Predicted Soon; Sugar To Hit New Low

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Consumers today could look forward to the easing of shortages of soap, shortening, cooking oils and paints after Oct. 1.

But sugar supplies are due for a sharp slash in the last three months of 1945. They will drop almost to the low point reached in 1942 after Pacific imports were shut off.

These were the prospects outlined by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson as he released data on the sugar, fats and oils allocations for October, November and December.

Anderson said an improvement in the fats and oils supply will make it possible to recommend the ending of rationing on shortening and cooking oils after Jan. 1.

Soap production will be allowed to rise to give civilians 17,600,000 pounds more in the last quarter of 1945 than in the present three-month period.

There also will be a 67 per cent increase in oils allocated for use in making linoleum, paints and varnishes.

JAP NEWSPAPER IS SUSPENDED BY MacARTHUR

TOKYO, Sept. 19—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today suspended a second Tokyo newspaper—the Nippon Times, usually regarded as a mouthpiece of the Japanese government—for violating his press directives.

MacArthur's headquarters slapped a 24-hour suspension on the English-language Times for "failure to submit certain copy for censorship prior to publication," an official announcement said. It took effect at 3:30 p. m. (2:30 a. m. EWT) and will prevent publication of the Thursday morning edition.

The action followed by only a day suspension for 48 hours of another morning newspaper, the influential Asahi, for publishing "inflammatory" headlines and dispatches in violation of MacArthur's directives. Asahi was scheduled to resume publication Friday morning barring an extension of the suspension.

The twin suspensions clearly showed that MacArthur was determined to prevent the Japanese press from printing colored news that would tend either to incite the Japanese against occupation troops or to shift some of the blame for the Pacific war, (Continued on Page Two)

Senate Acts Fast To Confirm Sen. Burton's Appointment To Court

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The senate today confirmed the nomination of Senator Harold H. Burton, R., Ohio to the supreme court of the United States. Chairman Pat McCarran of the judiciary committee asked the nomination be approved in a special executive session.

Burton is the first Republican proposed for that bench in more than 15 years. The late President Roosevelt preferred Democrats or New Dealers. He made seven men who met such qualifications associate justices between August, 1937 and February, 1943.

Burton's senate seat will be filled by appointment by Ohio's Gov. Frank J. Lausche, a Democrat. So it follows that Mr. Truman's party will gain one seat in the senate when Burton's successor takes office. The present party division in the senate is: Democrats 55; Republicans 40; Progressive 1.

Favorable Report Due
The senate judiciary committee must meet, and probably hold hearings, before reporting Burton's nomination to the senate. Its next regular meeting comes Monday. A favorable report is inevitable and confirmation would be immediate. The new associate justice is expected to support the political philosophy most frequently stated in the current court by Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone. Mr. Stone, Burton and Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, a Roosevelt nominee, probably will vote often together.

Labor opposition to Burton is expected partly on the basis of some of his votes since he entered the senate in January, 1941, but primarily because he was one of the authors of a bill introduced last June to amend the national labor relations act. Organized labor and (Continued on Page Two)

OPA Works On Material Prices After Building Controls Abolished

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Officials today rushed work on new measures to tighten control of prices on building materials but were frankly dubious about the prospects of keeping down prices of new homes.

They made no attempt to mask their disappointment over the action of Reconversion Chief John W. Snyder in wiping out controls on private home construction without authorizing some kind of price ceilings on dwellings.

Price Chief Chester Bowles fears that builders will concentrate on higher cost homes at a time when there is strong need for low-cost housing.

Although defeated in his fight for controls on new dwellings, Bowles reiterated his determination to hold the line on manufactured goods during the reconversion period.

In a letter to Dr. Paul H. Nyström of New York, chairman of the retail committee on cost absorption, Bowles rejected the committee's proposal that the OPA (Continued on Page Two)

YOUNG OFFICERS TOOK PALACE, JAP PRESS SAYS

TOKYO, Sept. 19—Lt. Gen. Shizuechi Tanaka, commander of Japanese eastern army headquarters, personally quelled a revolt by a group of young officers who took over control of the imperial palace in an effort to forestall formal announcement of Japan's surrender. The Tokyo newspaper Mainichi said today.

The newspaper gave a detailed account of the uprising, which assertedly was made by a group of Japanese general staff officers. The Mainichi version, however, did not wholly confirm previous reports that an uprising had taken place at such a time as to affect surrender negotiations between Japan and the Allies.

3 B-29S FLYING FROM JAPAN ON RECORD TRIP

6,500-Mile Flight Scheduled To End This Afternoon At Nation's Capital

'Blue Ribbon' Crews Man Planes Carrying Army Air Force Generals

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Three mighty Superfortresses winging their way non-stop from Japan to Washington via the great circle route reported that at 9 a. m. today they were 370 miles southeast of White Horse, Canada—the half-way point on their 6,500 mile flight.

An hour later, at 10 a. m. (EWT), the planes were over Fort St. John, British Columbia, 375 miles northwest of Edmonton.

The silvery sky giants, manned by blue-ribbon crews, were streaking across the Canadian Rockies on the homeward leg of their ambitious project.

Their non-stop hop would not be the longest on record, however. The established record of 7,158 miles was set November 5-7, 1938 by two British Royal Air Force Vickers-Wellesley planes which flew from Egypt to Australia without refueling or stopping.

The Superforts left Japan at 4 p. m. (EWT) Tuesday and were scheduled to land here at about 6 p. m. (EWT)—barring bad weather or unforeseen incidents.

From White Horse, the mammoth planes headed for the vicinity of Duluth, Minn., and then planned to roar down the home stretch to Washington via Hayward and Green Bay, Wis., Lansing, Mich., and Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Giles In Lead Plane
The lead plane was commanded by Lt. Gen. Barney Giles, deputy chief of U. S. strategic air forces in the Pacific. Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, chief of staff of the 20th Air Force, commanded the second plane and Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, commander of the 20th's 73rd bombing wing, was in charge of the third.

As they blazed their way down through Canada, the flying generals reported in a radio message that their flight was favored with unlimited visibility. They said there was only a scattered overcast.

White Horse was the half-way point from the standpoint of mileage, but not flying time. The planes were expected to make better time on the last half of their flight because of the steadily diminishing gas load.

26 Hours Estimated
Giles messaged Washington early this morning that the flight expected to arrive here about 6 p. m. EWT—marking an elapsed time of 26 hours since the takeoff from Japan.

"Can see nothing here that will stop us," Giles' message said. "May have to squeeze out a couple of gas cells to make it. All ships took off with 10,000 gallons experiencing no trouble."

Giles said that while the planes were flying off the tip of Kamchatka, three Russian P-63's flew alongside and "performed acrobatics."

The flight, moving along at 20,000 feet, met unexpected headwinds on the first 1,000 miles of the journey but Giles said the weather man "changed it to tailwinds when told he would be thrown overboard unless he did something about it."

Giles also asked Army officials to notify Mrs. Clyde A. Smith of Fairbanks that her husband, a (Continued on Page Two)

TRUMAN STATES OVERSEAS ARMY SIZE UNSETTLED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—President Truman said today that the "size or makeup" of the Army occupation forces abroad cannot be accurately determined until next Spring.

The President said the "impression" that "the speed of demobilization is governed by our future needs for occupation and other forces" is "not true."

"No one now can accurately forecast what those needs are going to be," the President said in a statement released by the White House.

Yesterday Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in Japan, asserted that the Japanese occupation force need be no larger than 200,000 regular Army troops.

At his news conference the President cited MacArthur's recent varying estimates of the manpower he will need, pointing out that MacArthur 30 days ago estimated he would need an occupation force of 500,000 men, and had now dropped to 200,000. The President said yesterday he was glad to hear this last estimate.

JAP NEWSPAPER IS SUSPENDED BY MacARTHUR

TOKYO, Sept. 19—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today suspended a second Tokyo newspaper—the Nippon Times, usually regarded as a mouthpiece of the Japanese government—for violating his press directives.

MacArthur's headquarters slapped a 24-hour suspension on the English-language Times for "failure to submit certain copy for censorship prior to publication," an official announcement said. It took effect at 3:30 p. m. (2:30 a. m. EWT) and will prevent publication of the Thursday morning edition.

The action followed by only a day suspension for 48 hours of another morning newspaper, the influential Asahi, for publishing "inflammatory" headlines and dispatches in violation of MacArthur's directives. Asahi was scheduled to resume publication Friday morning barring an extension of the suspension.

The twin suspensions clearly showed that MacArthur was determined to prevent the Japanese press from printing colored news that would tend either to incite the Japanese, against occupation troops or to shift some of the blame for the Pacific war, Japan and the Allies.

Senate Acts Fast To Confirm Sen. Burton's Appointment To Court

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The senate today confirmed the nomination of Senator Harold H. Burton, R., Ohio to the supreme court of the United States. Chairman Pat McCarran of the judiciary committee asked the nomination be approved in a special executive session.

Burton is the first Republican proposed for that bench in more than 15 years. The late President Roosevelt preferred Democrats or New Dealers. He made seven men who met such qualifications associate justices between August, 1937 and February, 1943.

Burton's senate seat will be filled by appointment by Ohio's Gov. Frank J. Lausche, a Democrat. So it follows that Mr. Truman's party will gain one seat in the senate when Burton's successor takes office. The present party division in the senate is: Democrats 55; Republicans 40; Progressive 1.

Favorable Report Due

The senate judiciary committee must meet, and probably hold hearings, before reporting Burton's nomination to the senate. Its next regular meeting comes Monday. A favorable report is inevitable and confirmation would be immediate. The new associate justice is expected to support the political philosophy most frequently stated in the current court by Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone. Mr. Stone, Burton and Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, a Roosevelt nominee, probably will vote often together.

Labor opposition to Burton is expected partly on the basis of some of his votes since he entered the senate in January, 1941, but primarily because he was one of the authors of a bill introduced last June to amend the national labor relations act. Organized labor and

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Office of Price Administration officials today rushed work on new measures to tighten control of prices on building materials but were frankly dubious about the prospects of keeping down prices of new homes.

They made no attempt to mask their disappointment over the action of Reconversion Chief John W. Snyder in wiping out controls on private home construction without authorizing some kind of price ceilings on dwellings.

Price Chief Chester Bowles fears that builders will concentrate on higher cost homes at a time when there is strong need for low-cost housing.

Although defeated in his fight for controls on new dwellings Bowles reiterated his determination to hold the line on manufactured goods during the reconversion period.

In a letter to Dr. Paul H. Nyström of New York, chairman of the retail committee on cost absorption, Bowles rejected the committee's proposal that the OPA

YOUNG OFFICERS TOOK PALACE, JAP PRESS SAYS

TOKYO, Sept. 19—Lt. Gen. Shizuichi Tanaka, commander of Japanese eastern army headquarters, personally quelled a revolt by a group of young officers who took over control of the imperial palace in an effort to forestall formal announcement of Japan's surrender. The Tokyo newspaper Mainichi said today.

The newspaper gave a detailed account of the uprising, which assertedly was made by a group of Japanese general staff officers. The Mainichi version, however, did not wholly confirm previous reports that an uprising had taken place at such a time as to affect surrender negotiations between Japan and the Allies.

At his news conference the President cited MacArthur's recent varying estimates of the manpower he will need, pointing out that MacArthur 30 days ago estimated he would need an occupation force of 500,000 men, and had now dropped to 200,000. The President said yesterday he was glad to hear this last estimate.

'Blue Ribbon' Crews Man Planes Carrying Army Air Force Generals

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—

Three mighty Superfortresses winging their way non-stop from Japan to Washington via the great circle route reported that at 9 a. m. today they were 370 miles southeast of White Horse, Canada—the half-way point on their 6,500 mile flight.

An hour later, at 10 a. m. (EWT), the planes were over Fort St. John, British Columbia, 375 miles northwest of Edmonton.

The silvery sky giants, manned by blue-ribbon crews, were streaking across the Canadian Rockies on the homeward leg of their ambitious project.

Their non-stop hop would not be the longest on record, however. The established record of 7,158 miles was set November 5-7, 1933 by two British Royal Air Force Vickers-Wellesley planes which flew from Egypt to Australia without refueling or stopping.

The Superforts left Japan at 4 p. m. (EWT) Tuesday and were scheduled to land here at about 6 p. m. (EWT)—barring bad weather or unforeseen incidents.

From White Horse, the mammoth planes headed for the vicinity of Duluth, Minn., and then planned to roar down the home stretch to Washington via Hayward and Green Bay, Wis., Lansing, Mich., and Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Giles In Lead Plane

The lead plane was commanded by Lt. Gen. Barney Giles, deputy chief of U. S. strategic air forces in the Pacific. Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, chief of staff of the 20th Air Force, commanded the second plane and Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, commander of the 20th's 73rd bombing wing, was in charge of the third.

As they blazed their way down through Canada, the flying generals reported in a radio message that their flight was favored with unlimited visibility. They said there was only a scattered overcast.

White Horse was the half-way point from the standpoint of mileage, but not flying time. The planes were expected to make better time on the last half of their flight because of the steadily diminishing gas load.

26 Hours Estimated

Giles messaged Washington early this morning that the flight expected to arrive here about 6 p. m. EWT—marking an elapsed time of 26 hours since the takeoff from Japan.

"Can see nothing here that will stop us," Giles' message said. "May have to squeeze out a couple of gas cells to make it. All ships took off with 10,000 gallons experiencing no trouble."

Giles said that while the planes were flying off the tip of Kamchatka, three Russian P-63's flew alongside and "performed acrobatics."

The flight, moving along at 20,000 feet, met unpredictable headwinds on the first 1,000 miles of the journey but Giles said the weather man "changed it to tailwinds" when told he would be thrown overboard unless he did something about it.

Giles also asked Army officials to notify Mrs. Clyde A. Smith of Fairbanks that her husband, a captain and a member of the crew, was passing over her home but that he was "sorry he can't drop in." Mrs. Smith was "Miss Fairbanks" in 1941.

Mrs. MacArthur and their son accompanied the general on his trip from Bataan to Australia in the dark days of 1942 and re-joined him in Manila following the liberation of the Philippines capital last year.

The mileage from the takeoff point—Muzatani airfield on Hokkaido, northernmost of the Japanese main islands—to Washington in 6,500 by way of the Nome-Fairbanks-Yukon point followed by the planes. An alternate southern route had been prepared in case bad weather was met.

The B-29's left Japanese soil within 19 minutes of each other beginning at 4:01 p. m. yesterday. Aboard and in command of the lead plane was Lt. Gen. Barney M. Giles, deputy commander of the U. S. strategic air forces in the Pacific. The second was in command of Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, chief of staff of the 20th Air Force, and the third under Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, commander of the 20th's 73rd bombing wing.

B-29 Vets On Trip

Their flight crews were composed of veterans of the B-29 campaign against the Japanese homeland who are eligible either for discharge or extended furloughs at home. Each plane carried a crew of 12 to permit rotation during the long trip.

After swinging down from Alaska and across the Canadian Rockies, the three planes will cross into the United States in the vicinity of Duluth, Minn., and head for Washington by way of Hayward and Green Bay, Wis., Lansing, Mich., and Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

The war department said the Mizutani airfield, near Hokkaido's capital city of Sapporo, was chosen for the takeoff because it is one of the few in Japan which has the long, concrete runways necessary for B-29 takeoffs.

Japs Planned Field

Ironically, the field reportedly was built by the Japanese to accommodate the big four-engine bombers that they planned to send on suicide missions against American cities. The big American ships are following virtually the same course that would have been taken by the Japanese suicide pilots if their plans had materialized.

plications of international law to be untangled first.

He pointed out that Hirohito is the "constitutional head" of a government, adding: "for a group of nations to try the head of a state as a war criminal would involve complications of international law that have not been solved."

Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., ranking Democrat on the committee, commented: "It seems to me that this comes a little late. It doesn't seem to me that we should make a peace treaty and then change the conditions after it is made."

left wing criticism of the proposed amendments has been bitter.

FDR Men Dominant

Burton is a middle-of-the-road Republican. His nomination marks a return to the philosophy of party representation on the supreme court. Even so, the Roosevelt members on the nine-man court are likely to be dominant there for the next 10 to 20 years. Burton will succeed Owen J. Roberts, retired, who was the last nominee of distinctive Republican affiliations named to the court until Mr. Truman sent Burton's name up yesterday. Roberts was nominated by Herbert C. Hoover in 1930.

No Hoover nominee remains now on the court. Mr. Stone was nominated to be associate justice by the late Calvin Coolidge. He was promoted by Mr. Roosevelt to be chief justice.

Congressional Republicans and Democrats joined in lauding Burton's appointment. Typical comment:

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley: "An excellent appointment."

Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O.: "The President could not have appointed a better lawyer, a more impartial judge, or a man of higher ideals."

Burton, Taft Differ

Burton's moderate Republicanism is reflected in comparison with Taft, his better known Ohio colleague. A compilation of significant senate votes covering a period of four years—1941-44—shows that Burton and Taft differed on 26 of 96 roll calls. In general, however, Burton was a qualified member of the anti-Roosevelt opposition. He opposed subsidies, balked at some efforts to increase corporation taxes and uniformly was in favor of freezing federal security pay roll taxation at existing levels. He was against prohibition on the only such issue which arose. That was a 1942 proposal to put a limited rider on the "teen age draft bill."

Burton was an all-out advocate of a world organization to maintain post-war peace but he approached war and some of Mr. Roosevelt's pre-war projects cautiously and in some doubt. While he still was at peace in 1941 he bucked the administration by voting to limit the use of our armed forces to the western hemisphere, to substitute a $2,000,000,000 loan for Mr. Roosevelt's lend-lease proposals and to maintain bans against American shipping entering belligerent ports or combat zones. He also voted to condemn labor stoppages in defense plants.

When the senate refused to substitute an outright loan for the lend-lease plan, Burton voted for lend-lease. He also supported the administration with a vote in 1941 to expand the term of compulsory military service by 18 months.

In that year he voted against an anti-administration bill restricting transfer of naval vessels and opposed the administration on revision of the neutrality act.

FORRESTAL SAYS BIG PEACETIME NAVY IS NEEDED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal said today existence of the atomic bomb does not call for scrapping the Navy. He urged a substantial peacetime fleet and air force because "control of the ocean and of the air over it as the key to our own security."

Testifying before the house naval affairs committee on plans for postwar naval strength, Forrestal said:

"No enemy can reach us without coming across the sea. We cannot reach or defeat an aggressor without crossing the sea."

Therefore, he said, the United States should have a "postwar active fleet" of about 300 major combat ships, about 800 major combat ship in "ready" and "laid up" reserve, a minimum of about 8000 naval planes and 500,000 to 600,000 officers and men—the largest peacetime naval force in the nation's history.

HONOR AL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan announced today that the late Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York, will be honored with a three-cent commemorative postage stamp to be issued in New York Nov. 26. Description of the stamp will be issued later.

history. He recaptured not only functions that were divorced from the department under stress of war but inherited agencies set up in both peace and war to keep labor-management relations on an even keel.

Davis' removal as stabilization chief appeared to have been based at least in part on his recent statement that wages should rise 50 per cent in the next five years without increasing the cost of living. Mr. Truman told his news conference late yesterday that Davis was not speaking for the administration when he made that statement.

"Nobody in this government is going to make a statement like that until after such a policy is

DETROIT, Sept. 19.—The CIO United Auto Workers union acted today to bring order into its own house and beat government conciliators in settlement of sweeping strike threats in the automobile industry.

As a battery of federal labor department agents was ordered into the explosive Detroit labor situation, Richard T. Frankenstein, UAW vice president, scheduled daylong conferences with strikers and management at the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel company.

discussed between members of the cabinet and Snyder." Schwellenbach said at a news conference following the President's meeting with the press.

Auto Strike First

Schwellenbach set his first objective to find out what can be done to end the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co. strike in Detroit, which has closed Ford Motor Co. plants, and to avert other work stoppages that would interfere with reconversion of the automobile industry.

He said Edgar L. Warren, 40, new head of the labor department's conciliation service, would explore the situation and, if necessary, make a trip to Detroit to see if there were enough men there to do the job. Warren, former chairman of the Chicago and Kansas City regional WLB, was to report here for his new duties this morning.

Schwellenbach also scheduled conferences with the War Labor Board and War Manpower Commission to discuss the transfer of their functions, powers and appropriations to the labor department as ordered by Mr. Truman.

Opposes Seizure

He will continue to certify cases to the WLB. He will not interfere with board decisions or attempt to enforce them, leaving that to Snyder. He is opposed to compulsory arbitration and the seizure of plants, the most common wartime method to end strikes.

Schwellenbach said that he will not set up procedures to force people to operate their plants or work in them. He said he expected the labor-management conference beginning November 5 to work out voluntary methods for settling peacetime labor disputes.

The reorganization did not give Schwellenbach control over either the Fair Employment Practice Committee or the National Labor Relations Board, although that may come later. He also expects to get in the future the retraining and reemployment administration from the veterans bureau, labor relations section of the state department, unemployment compensation and apprentice training from WMC and labor divisions of the Army, Navy, War Production Board and Maritime commission.

More Changes Coming

Mr. Truman said that eventually every labor agency in the government will be centralized in the labor department.

Schwellenbach said he believed that persons made idle by strikes in other plants should be eligible for unemployment compensation.

OHIO POLITICS BUZZING AGAIN

give a new aspect of stability and strength to that court," the governor said. "The increased balance that is given to the court is a fine omen."

The governor emphasized that he would not limit his final choice for a successor to the proposed list and that he would not act hurriedly.

With Burton out of the political picture, Bricker is considered likely to run for the senate next year. He must keep himself in the political limelight if he is to renew his presidential aspirations in 1948, and he still admits that he is looking toward the White House.

Beightler Boomed

If Bricker should seek the senatorial seat, it would clear the way for Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commanding general of the 37th division, to bid for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

The GOP primary contest for governor, however, will be hot and heavy if Bricker decides to try for the senate. Former Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert of Cleveland already has indicated that he will be a primary candidate regardless of his opposition.

State treasurer Don H. Ebricht and former Lt. Gov. Paul M. Herbert also were expected to seek the gubernatorial nomination. Reportedly they would withdraw from the race only if Bricker wanted a fourth term as governor.

Ebricht said yesterday that he expected to announce his political plans in about 30 days. He believed that Burton's appointment "somewhat eased and clarified the Republican picture for 1946."

He also thought that Bricker could have the party's senatorial nomination if he wanted it.

First Ohioan Since 1930

Burton will be the first Ohioan to serve on the supreme court since the death of the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft in March, 1930. Taft was appointed by President Harding in 1920.

The only other Ohioan who served on the high court bench during recent decades was Judge John H. Clarke, of Cleveland, who was appointed by President Wilson in 1916 and served until his resignation September, 1922.

DRAFT-AGE BOYS GIVEN CHOICE—ARMY OR SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Selective service today gave American high school boys the choice of going to school or to the army—and if it's school they can't play hooky.

It announced that boys who entered high school before they were 18 years of age will be given a chance to graduate before becoming eligible for induction.

If their choice is school, selective service said, the boys will have to attend "continuously and satisfactorily."

The new regulation applies to all students until they reach the age of 20. If a student fails to graduate by the time he is 20 he automatically becomes liable to induction.

The United States department of education reported that there are 317,000 boys aged 18 and 19 now attending high school throughout the country. Of these 214,000 are 18 years old and 76,000 are 19.

The average graduation age is around 17 1/2.

been reports that Gens. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, Henry H. Arnold, commander of the Air Forces, and Brehon B. Somervell, chief of Army Service Forces, also will step down soon. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has been mentioned most frequently as Marshall's successor.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur also has figured in the speculation as next chief of staff. But he is one year past the retirement age of 64 and served once before as chief of staff. Eisenhower will be 55 next month.

Some believe that Marshall may prefer to stay at his post until congress completes its Pearl Harbor investigation. He was criticized by an Army board of inquiry for failure to give adequate warning to the Hawaiian command, although both Mr. Truman and Stimson said the criticism was not justified.

Patterson's appointment was the seventh cabinet change that Mr. Truman has made since taking office. He now has left only three members of the cabinet inherited from the late President Roosevelt.

Patterson is a lean, balding man of medium height, quiet in manner and plain in dress but in common with Stimson bears the hallmark of integrity. The understanding which existed between the two men was seen in Patterson's tribute to the retiring secretary.

"With the inspiring leadership of Secretary Stimson," Patterson said, "the war department reached its highest level of service to the nation. The American people will always honor and revere him for his great achievements in peace and war. In the presence of that devoted patriot it was not possible to harbor a selfish thought. If my nomination to be secretary of war is confirmed, it will be my aim to maintain, to the best of my ability, the high standard set by Secretary Stimson."

Before retiring Stimson presented the distinguished service medal to Patterson in acknowledgment of his services.

strikes were threatened along the Texas Gulf coast. The Gulf Oil Co. and the Texaco refineries at Port Arthur, Tex., were expected to close momentarily after 10,000 workers voted to strike to enforce wage demands.

Production workers at the Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron, O., began returning to their jobs today as operating units were set up. The workers numbering approximately 15,000, voted Sunday night to cross picket lines set up by 800 foremen seeking recognition for their independent union.

Picket lines appeared around the East Pittsburgh plant of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. yesterday as 10 white collar workers struck for incentive bonuses. The 11-day-old work stoppage curtailed operations in three Westinghouse plants and idled some 27,000 production workers.

A strike of 1,000 United Fuel Gas Co. pumping station operators entered its second week today following failure of another attempt to settle a wage dispute. Company officials rejected a union proposal to submit the dispute to war labor board arbitration.

In Philadelphia, 75 vessels were tied along the river channel, unable to maneuver to piers because of a strike of 400 tugboat employees. The strike, now in its fifth day, has forced closure of the Port Richmond grain elevator at the Reading Co. largest grain elevator on the Atlantic seaboard.

It is a good idea to save old corks for various household uses. A cork dipped in benzoin or gasoline will take spots out of linoleum or off windows when ordinary cleaning fails. A cork dipped in soap or a mild abrasive does a good job of cleaning kitchen knives, with no danger of cutting yourself. Dip a cork in paraffine to clean the tiles of the hearth.

LONG SPEECH

THERE seems to be general agreement that President Truman's recent address to Congress, while noble in purpose and doubtless valuable in the long run, was unfortunate in technique. It is unfair, or at least unwise, to dump upon the American public a document of 16,000 words and expect it to be read widely.

According to the reports of stout-hearted citizens who have ventured into the mazes of that address and plowed through to the last syllable, it was a good speech in the sense that it had a lot of good material in it, well worth study and assimilation by the American public. But the mere length of it was such a deterring factor that it was not read anywhere near so widely as it might have been, and so a lot of good ideas and suggestions were lost.

Such procedure was strange, too, because the President seems to be normally a man of rather few words, well expressed. Maybe he took bad advice. Or maybe he wanted to get everything that people wanted or expected him to say off his chest at once, so he could go ahead from there without impediment. Whatever the reason, probably it won't happen again.

BIG SET-BACK

JAPAN is now reduced to a fourth-rate nation, says General MacArthur. He should be a competent judge. And apparently he had in mind not only the assured military helplessness of that nation for a long time to come, but the corresponding slump in minds, moral strength and creative power.

The Japanese leaders, like the German leaders, staked the lives and fortunes of their nation on an evil cause, and lost. Their world has been smashed, and they have to build a new one slowly and painfully, starting with the rubbish that lies around them.

If they can learn the lesson involved in this debacle, there may yet be use and opportunity for them on this planet. But they have lost perhaps 50 years. It is the same old, eternal lesson that crime doesn't pay and there is no real human progress without moral progress.

Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's name seems to mean "wagon-maker", yet nobody is unleashing the good old barber-shop chords of "Wait for the Wagon."

There is no rest from what we quaintly call progress. No sooner do we begin to get settled down than invisible and incomprehensible things called atoms start busting all around us.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary can forget about civilization.

Reconversion Progressing
Faster Than Anticipated

Motorcar Rationing End
Possibly Before January

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The prophets of gloom are wondering whether they will have to do a turnabout because the first few weeks following the Japanese surrender have presented the country with what looks like a pleasant surprise.

Reconversion is moving ahead faster than anticipated, unemployment is not as bad as had been feared, and labor, industry and government are inclined to be cautiously optimistic about all prospects.

WPA Chairman J. A. Krug's first reconversion report indicated a rosy picture for all the hard goods industries making such civilian items as automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, etc.

In each case the anticipated production of a given product by the end of 1945 was a figure above previous predictions. Industry generally has applauded the prompt removal of federal controls and through these removals has been able to gear itself to high-production figures. Further, the estimates probably err on the conservative side, since business traditionally will make predictions that are below the mark, if anything.

So it looks as if Mr. and Mrs. America could expect to begin receiving a fair-sized trickle of consumers' hard goods by January, and a year hence more a year than before Pearl Harbor. Car rationing will

For instance, the motor car industry is expected to be turning out cars at a rate of six million annually in 1946, which is two million cars more a year than before Pearl Harbor. Car rationing will

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(continuing from Monday) Now the idea is being advanced that it is not correct to say the British want to cancel the $29,000,000,000 of give-lease obligations and get $6,000,000,000 more money to finance their planned Socialist purchase of their own industries. Technically this is true; actually it is not true. They have come here with great piles of import-export figures, claiming they lost their trade during the war (certainly not to us), and saying they will use the new money to buy more foreign exchange than the export-import bank can furnish them. I have seen other figures showing they broke about even on exports and imports during the war, aside from give-lease. Certainly they need many things. Perhaps they will use the money for that purpose, although not all with us.

But only by our capitalism bailing them out, can they put themselves in a financial position for their expensive Socialism. Without the cancellation of the $29,000,000,000 and more cash, and the export-import bank and the Bretton Woods foreign exchange funds, will they be able financially to swing their purchase of their bank, railroads, etc? No one will or can deny this.

In the truest sense, therefore, they are using our money to finance their anti-capitalist program—and they do not want to pay interest on it while paying double interest to their own people for the purchase, and cancelling our give-lease while making repayment of real lend-lease to their own colonies. It is unquestionably true then that they propose to drain from our capitalism the fruits with which to kill their own, and Laski and the other Socialist mentors at home are all the while publicly saying it would be a dastardly assault upon their honor for us to interfere at all with their plans, which logically anticipate dislocation of their whole financial system.

A person must pinch himself to ascertain if he has lost his senses when faced with such boldly-proclaimed unreasonableness, but this is all a matter of public record, a record merely obscured for the present by carefully contrived propaganda.

Britain is a nation of around 47,000,000 people, roughly one-third of our population, although her empire has 557,000,000, more than a fourth of the population of the earth. Her payable production is not imposing aside from woollens, linen and scotch whiskey but her empire produces every material which we need, and in most of which, we are short. While we have 3 times more people, we also have more than 3 times more debt. While she is reducing hers and cutting her commitments, we are enlarging ours.

A fair agreement would not appear difficult if both nations exhibited a reasonable attitude.

I know what I would do, if confronted by the proposition Britain has built up for our chief delegate, Will Clayton. If I could keep my temper in the face of such British impositions upon my intelligence, I would send Keynes and Halifax home, and tell them to send over Prof. Laski and the chancellor of the Exchequer, as we must deal with someone of authority to know

SINCE 1889, epidemics of eye diseases which are similar in nature to each other have been described. However, in 1938, it would appear that an epidemic of an eye condition called keratoconjunctivitis began in Malaya, spreading from Malaya to Hawaii, and then to the United States. Just how keratoconjunctivitis is spread is not known.

The signs and symptoms of the disease are like those of any other acute inflammation of the lining membrane over the eyeball. In the first stage there is a feeling as if something is in the eye with moderate itching and burning. The upper lid becomes swollen and the lining membrane is reddened and congested. The eye often feels enlarged and many of the patients complain of pain and discomfort on moving the eyeball.

After about two days the condition becomes worse. The redness and swelling increase and the lymph glands in front of the ear enlarge. At this time, also, there may be symptoms affecting the nose and throat with a feeling of scratchiness in the throat. In some cases, actual inflammation of the throat has been noted. Watering of the eyes occurs and often the tears are bloodstained. Frequently, there are small hemorrhages into the lining membrane of the eye.

In the next stage of keratoconjunctivitis, there may be changes in the front part of the eyeball or cornea. This causes some blurring of the eyesight, and some pain or discomfort when the eyes are exposed to light. The cornea may be so damaged that scars form on it which means that the light rays passing into the eye will be obstructed.

Up to the present no treatment which is particularly effective has been found for keratoconjunctivitis. A number of things have been tried such as sulfathiazole ointment and penicillin. Another germ-killing substance known as tyrothricin has also been used.

Doctor Alton E. Braley of New York City tried the use of convalescent serum on a number of patients, but found that it also was not effective. Convalescent serum is blood serum taken from patients who have recovered from the eye infection.

It would appear that a great deal further study of keratoconjunctivitis is necessary. It is probable that it is caused by a virus, that is, an organism so small that it can pass through the openings in a porcelain filter. Persons with this condition must take care not to spread it to others, as it is possible that it is contagious.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. H.: Would you please tell me what a cystoscopy treatment is?

Answer: Cystoscopy refers to an examination of the bladder through an instrument known as a cystoscope. This is a tube with lights which makes it possible to look directly into the bladder.

I. S.: In the diabetic diet, must a person watch out for a vitamin deficiency?

Answer: A vitamin deficiency may occur in persons using a diet for diabetes but will not develop if the diet is kept properly balanced. In some instances it may be advisable to employ vitamin preparations which the physician will prescribe.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

SANDRA SAID, in answer to Gordon Adams' sharp question: "I want to give Belinda a dress."

"A dress? You must be crazy!" The color flared beneath his recently deepened tan. "And there is no doubt that you are insulting. You want to buy a dress for Belinda Adams as if she were some homeless waif. That's a hot one!" His chest all but vibrated with his anger.

"Keep your voice down, please." The quiet of Sandra's order somehow made him obey.

"Skeeter probably has 40 or 50 dresses."

"Poor child. If they all look like the one she had on at dinner last night, I can only say again, poor child."

"Why, I never heard of such in-sufferable—"

Sandra's chin clicked upward and those fiery sparks brightened her topaz eyes. "Why is it so insulting to give her a dress and so wonderful to give her a pair of boots?"

The man seemed to hug the boots tighter against him. "Because these are special—they are made to order. Oh," he ground out wearily, "why should I try to explain to an easterner what good boots mean here in the West?" He said again: "They are special."

"And this dress will be special," insisted the red-haired girl. "I can't make her a made-to-order dress. I'd like to, but there isn't time. Besides, it is against the doctor's orders. I can't even thread a needle or pick up a pair of scissors without getting shakes as bad as yours."

"Then forget it, Miss Edwards." The man started out of the store.

Sandra followed directly after him, that is, until she reached the dress racks. Then she stopped, grabbing hold of Gordon Adams' arm at the same time, so that he was forced to stop.

"I refuse to forget it. I want to look at the things here. I'm sure I can find something that will please her."

"You couldn't please her!" Sandra gave a little sarcastic smile. Wakeman and Benet were most familiar with it; it usually cost them money. The ranch owner was not familiar with the smile, but it was going to cost him also.

The pleasure of having his own way.

"How odd, when I've pleased so many persons. Remember," stated the girl, "that Sandra Edwards is a clothes authority. Clothes have been my entire life for several years. If I, she said with smugness, "so much as select a dress from that rack, it proves that it is a better than average dress or I'd not have noticed it in the first place." Her manner was infuriating. Gordon Adams. She intended that it should.

"Belinda doesn't like dresses." His jaw was angrily out-thrust.

"And I don't blame her." Sandra continued her cold derision. "The sort of dresses that are put on that child shouldn't be put on a rag doll."

"There's nothing like a stranger telling you how to run your life." "I seem to remember your asking me to come with you."

"Sure. To help me select something extra for Skeeter. Something she would like. I didn't ask you to go loco and stage a battle right in the middle of Porter's."

"You're the one who is making a disturbance. You are the one who is yelling."

Further enraged by the girl's placid manner, Gordon Adams mumbled rudely: "Don't bother helping me with an extra gift. I'll do it myself."

"That's fine." The red-haired girl's voice was sugar and cream. "That way I can devote all my time to selecting her dress."

"If you must make a fool of yourself!"

The confidence Sandra had displayed in Porter's was not with her when she was back at the Mesquite Ranch. Although she had appeared as unconcerned as Gordon Adams on their return trip, actually his silence had made her uncomfortable.

She was glad to be back in her own quarters, even though she still was as ill at ease as she had been when cringing inwardly beneath Gordon Adams' disapproval. Spenser was there waiting for her. Better still, he was delighted to see her.

"What's in the big box?" he inquired. "Ranch clothes for me, by any chance?"

"No, dear." Her auburn brows were lifted in astonishment. "I'm sorry, I didn't know you wanted ranch clothes."

The British youngster looked as uncomfortable as she was feeling. During their first days at the Mesquite he had been most emphatic in his low opinion of cowboy attire.

He sat down on a yellow leather davenport, beside his guardian. "Naturally, I'd not wear them every day, Sandra. Just here on the Mesquite." He glanced disgustedly down at his bare knees. "I feel definitely absurd in these English oxfords and long socks and these trousers." A wistful sound entered his voice. "Besides, if I had boots I'd be taller."

Taller than Belinda. That was what he meant. Sandra knew that and had all she could do to keep from making the horrible mistake of giggling.

She bit a smile from her lips. "You shall have them, Spenser. Immediately."

"Not immediately," he corrected gently. "Good boots are made to order, y'know."

Am I going through that again, the girl wondered. "That's right, dear."

"It takes time, y'know, Sandra." "Yes, dear," she said again. "That's why I wish I'd known you wanted western clothes. I'd have ordered them when Mr. Adams and I went to La Madera."

"That reminds me—how did you happen to go to the city with Mr. Adams?" The boy frowned a bit. "When Brody told me where you'd gone—by jove, Sandra, I was amazed. I scarcely could believe my own ears—I say, do you like him?" His frown deepened.

"Not particularly." Again Sandra bit at her lips, this time, however, not to deaden a smile, but to prevent her saying more than she should against Belinda's father.

"He asked me to go with him and help select Belinda's birthday gifts. So I did."

Again the large box attracted Spenser's interest. He slipped a finger beneath its wrapping twine. "And this is it? Tell me, what is it?" he asked a second time.

"A dress."

"Not one of those bally affairs with a flower garden on it, I hope." So even Spenser had wisdom enough to know the dress Belinda had worn at dinner was an atrocity. Such adult knowledge, though frequently evident in the boy, always surprised her.

"This dress," she assured the English child, "is a dream dress. When Belinda puts it on, the will be a different person."

Spenser's question was so pointed that it taunted. "Do you think she will put it on?"

"I don't know." Her little charge had simply spoken Sandra's own worries. She took the other, smaller Porter package from her purse and handed it to Spenser. "Here. This is a charm bracelet for you to give her."

"But, Sandra, dash it all, I have Belinda's present. It's in the bathroom."

"What do you mean, 'it'?" "A puppy. An Irish setter."

"How did you know she wanted a puppy?"

"I didn't

LONG SPEECH

THERE seems to be general agreement that President Truman's recent address to Congress, while noble in purpose and doubtless valuable in the long run, was unfortunate in technique. It is unfair, or at least unwise, to dump upon the American public a document of 16,000 words and expect it to be read widely.

According to the reports of stout-hearted citizens who have ventured into the mazes of that address and plowed through to the last syllable, it was a good speech in the sense that it had a lot of good material in it, well worth study and assimilation by the American public. But the mere length of it was such a deterring factor that it was not read anywhere near so widely as it might have been, and so a lot of good ideas and suggestions were lost.

Such procedure was strange, too, because the President seems to be normally a man of rather few words, well expressed. Maybe he took bad advice. Or maybe he wanted to get everything that people wanted or expected him to say off his chest at once, so he could go ahead from there without impediment. Whatever the reason, probably it won't happen again.

BIG SET-BACK

JAPAN is now reduced to a fourth-rate nation, says General MacArthur. He should be a competent judge. And apparently he had in mind not only the assured military helplessness of that nation for a long time to come, but the corresponding slump in minds, moral strength and creative power.

The Japanese leaders, like the German leaders, staked the lives and fortunes of their nation on an evil cause, and lost. Their world has been smashed, and they have to build a new one slowly and painfully, starting with the rubbish that lies around them.

If they can learn the lesson involved in this debacle, there may yet be use and opportunity for them on this planet. But they have lost perhaps 50 years. It is the same old, eternal lesson that crime doesn't pay and there is no real human progress without moral progress.

Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's name seems to mean "wagon-maker", yet nobody is unleashing the good old barber-shop chords of "Wait for the Wagon."

There is no rest from what we quaintly call progress. No sooner do we begin to get settled down than invisible and incomprehensible things called atoms start busting all around us.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary can forget about civilization.

Reconversion Progressing Faster Than Anticipated | Motorcar Rationing End Possibly Before January

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The prophets of gloom are wondering whether they will have to do a turnaround because the first few weeks following the Japanese surrender have presented the country with what looks like a pleasant surprise.

Reconversion is moving ahead faster than anticipated, unemployment is not as bad as had been feared, and labor, industry and government are inclined to be cautiously optimistic about all prospects.

WPE Chairman J. A. Krug's first reconversion report indicated a rosy picture for all the hard goods industries making such civilian items as automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, etc.

In each case the anticipated production of a given product by the end of 1945 was a figure above previous predictions. Industry generally has applauded the prompt removal of federal controls and through these removals has been able to gear itself to high-production figures. Further, the estimates probably err on the conservative side, since business traditionally will make predictions that are below the mark, if anything.

So it looks as if Mr. and Mrs. America could expect to begin receiving a fair-sized trickle of "consumers' hard goods" by January, and a year from now the experts expect production sufficient to meet any demand.

For instance, the motor car industry is expected to be turning out cars at a rate of six million annually in 1946, which is two million cars more a year than before Pearl Harbor. Car rationing will

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(continuing from Monday) Now the idea is being advanced that it is not correct to say the British want to cancel the $29,000,000,000 of give-lease obligations and get $6,000,000,000 more money to finance their planned Socialist purchase of their own industries. Technically this is true; actually it is not true. They have come here with great piles of import-export figures, claiming they lost their trade during the war (certainly not to us,) and saying they will use the new money to buy more foreign exchange than the export-import bank can furnish them. I have seen other figures showing they broke about even on exports and imports during the war, aside from give-lease. Certainly they need many things. Perhaps they will use the money for that purpose, although not all with us.

But only by our capitalism bailing them out, can they put themselves in a financial position for their expensive Socialism. Without the cancellation of the $29,000,000,000 and more cash, and the export-import bank and the Bretton Woods foreign exchange funds, will they be able financially to swing their purchase of their bank, railroads, etc? No one will or can deny this.

In the truest sense, therefore, they are using our money to finance their anti-capitalist program—and they do not want to pay interest on it while paying double interest to their own people for the purchase, and cancelling our give-lease while making repayment of real lend-lease to their own colonies. East pleaded that his diamond return was because a club lead would have presented South a trick if holding the club A. Why not a third heart then? It could not have hurt, unless South had only two originally. And that could not be so, since West led the 9. If West held four, the 3, 5, 6 and 9, he would have led his fourth-best 3. So West couldn't possibly have more than three cards. If two, the ruff of a third heart would have set the contract at once; if three, the third heart lead would have taken a dangerous entry out of the dummy. In any case, the heart lead would have been the safest play to assure setting the contract.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

SANDRA SAID, in answer to Gordon Adams' sharp question: "I want to give Belinda a dress."

"A dress? You must be crazy!" The color flared beneath his recently deepened tan. "And there is no doubt that you are insulting. You want to buy a dress for Belinda Adams as if she were some homeless waif. That's a hot one!" His chest all but vibrated with his anger.

"Keep your voice down, please." The quiet of Sandra's order somehow made him obey.

"Skeeter probably has 40 or 50 dresses."

"Poor child. If they all look like the one she had on at dinner last night, I can only say again, poor child."

"Why, I never heard of such insufferable—"

Sandra's chin clicked upward and those fiery sparks brightened her topaz eyes. "Why is it so insulting to give her a dress and so wonderful to give her a pair of boots?"

The man seemed to hug the boots tighter against him. "Because these are special—they are made to order. Oh," he ground out wearily, "why should I try to explain to an easterner what good boots mean here in the West?" He said again: "They are special."

"And this dress will be special," insisted the red-haired girl. "I can't make her a made-to-order dress. I'd like to, but there isn't time. Besides, it is against the doctor's orders. I can't even thread a needle or pick up a pair of scissors without getting shakes as bad as yours."

"Then forget it, Miss Edwards." The man started out of the store. Sandra followed directly after him, that is, until she reached the dress racks. Then she stopped, grabbing hold of Gordon Adams' arm at the same time, so that he was forced to stop.

"I refuse to forget it. I want to look at the things here. I'm sure I can find something that will please her."

"You couldn't please her!" Sandra gave a little sarcastic smile. Wakeman and Benet were most familiar with it; it usually cost them money. The ranch owner was not familiar with the smile, but it was going to cost him also. The pleasure of having his own way.

"How odd, when I've pleased so many persons. Remember," stated the girl, "that Sandra Edwards is a clothes authority. Clothes have been her entire life for several years. If I," she said with smugness, "so much as select a dress from that rack, it proves that it is a better than average dress or I'd not have noticed it in the first place." Her manner was infuriating Gordon Adams. She intended that it should.

"Belinda doesn't like dresses." His jaw was angrily out-thrust. "And I don't blame her." Sandra continued her cold derision. "The sort of dresses that are put on that child shouldn't be put on a rag doll."

"There's nothing like a stranger telling you how to run your life." "I seem to remember your asking me to come with you."

"Sure. To help me select something extra for Skeeter. Something she would like. I didn't ask you to go loco and stage a battle right in the middle of Porter's."

"You're the one who is making a disturbance. You are the one who is yelling."

Further enraged by the girl's placid manner, Gordon Adams mumbled rudely: "Don't bother helping me with an extra gift. I'll do it myself."

"That's fine." The red-haired girl's voice was sugar and cream. "That way I can devote all my time to selecting her dress."

"If you must make a fool of yourself!"

The confidence Sandra had displayed in Porter was not with her when she was back at the Mesquite Ranch. Although she had appeared as unconcerned as Gordon Adams on their return trip, actually his silence had made her uncomfortable.

She was glad to be back in her own quarters, even though she still was as ill at ease as she had been when cringing inwardly beneath Gordon Adams' disapproval. Spenser was there waiting for her. Better still, he was delighted to see her.

"What's in the big box?" he inquired. "Ranch clothes for me, by any chance?"

"No, dear." Her auburn brows were lifted in astonishment. "I'm sorry. I didn't know you wanted ranch clothes."

The British youngster looked as uncomfortable as she was feeling. During their first days at the Mesquite he had been most emphatic in his low opinion of cowboy attire.

He sat down on a yellow leather davenport, beside his guardian. "Naturally, I'd not wear them every day, Sandra. Just here on the Mesquite." He glanced disgustedly down at his bare knees. "I feel definitely absurd in these English oxfords and long socks and these trousers." A wistful sound entered his voice. "Besides, if I had boots I'd be taller."

Taller than Belinda. That was what he meant. Sandra knew that and had all she could do to keep from making the horrible mistake of giggling.

She bit a smile from her lips. "You shall have them, Spenser. Immediately."

"Not immediately," he corrected gently. "Good boots are made to order, y'know."

"Am I going through that again, the girl wondered. 'That's right, dear.'"

"It takes time, y'know, Sandra." "Yes, dear," she said again. "That's why I wish I'd known you wanted western clothes. I'd have ordered them when Mr. Adams and I went to La Madera."

"That reminds me—how did you happen to go to the city with Mr. Adams?" The boy frowned a bit. "When Brody told me where you'd gone—by jove, Sandra, I was amazed. I scarcely could believe my own ears—I say, do you like him?" His frown deepened.

"Not particularly." Again Sandra bit at her lips, this time, however, not to deaden a smile, but to prevent her saying more than she should against Belinda's father.

"He asked me to go with him and help select Belinda's birthday gifts. So I did."

Again the large box attracted Spenser's interest. He slipped a finger beneath its wrapping twine. "And this is?" Tell me, what is it?" he asked a second time.

"A dress."

"Not one of those bailey affairs with a flower garden on it, I hope."

When Spenser had wisdom enough to know the dress Belinda had worn at dinner was an atrocity. Such adult knowledge, though frequently evident in the boy, always surprised her.

"This dress," she assured the English child, "is a dream dress. When Belinda puts it on, she will be a different person."

Spenser's question was so pointed that it taunted. "Do you think she will put it on?"

"I don't know." Her little charge had simply spoken Sandra's own worries. She took the dress, smaller Porter package from her purse and handed it to Spenser. "Here. This is a charm bracelet for you to give her."

"But, Sandra, dash it all, I have Belinda's present. It's in the bathroom."

"What do you mean, 'it'?" "A puppy. An Irish setter."

"How did you know she wanted a puppy?"

"I didn't. But I do now. She thinks it is a puppy. And she is so angry," he reported happily, "that she won't even speak to me."

Conservation Is Topic At Meeting Of DAR

Mr. Harper Gives Illustrated Lecture

"Conservation is the Intelligent Use of Our World," Arthur Harper, field naturalist, told the members of the Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughter of the American Revolution Tuesday evening when they met in the Methodist church for the September meeting.

Mr. Harper who was introduced by Miss Marie Hamilton, gave an illustrated lecture on conservation. The pictures shown were all taken in Ohio. Many were of places where ignorance and neglect had wasted and destroyed our natural resources and beauty spots. Mr. Harper explained how much of this waste can be averted and urged his listeners to use their influence in curbing such actions.

Mrs. Charles Pugsley, newly elected regent, was in charge of the meeting which was opened by the group singing "The Star Spangled Banner." The ritualistic service of the chapter was followed by the salute to the flag led by Mrs. Helen B. Anderson.

Mrs. J. Beryl Stevenson, conservation chairman for the chapter, talked on the D. A. R. state project, the reforestation of Blue Rock Forest, near Zanesville. The department during the next two years, will plant tulip poplar and pine trees and completely reforest this large tract of land which is now almost completely devoid of vegetation.

Mrs. Glen Hines, Ashville, rendered a vocal solo. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Martin Cromley.

Following the lecture the guests were invited to the church basement where refreshments were served by the committee composed of Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Miss Marie L. Hamilton, Mrs. W. T. Uim, Mrs. B. R. Bales, Mrs. George Roth, Mrs. C. D. Closson, Mrs. Martin Cromley and Miss Eliza Plum.

"United Brethren Youth Fellowship" is the name by which the former Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the Morris church will be known in the future. This name was decided upon at the meeting of the society held Tuesday evening at the home of Marvene and Robert Arledge near Kingston.

The meeting which was styled a "depression party" was attended by 11 members with Miss Helen Pontius, president in charge. The Rev. F. E. Dunn, pastor, read the scripture lesson and Miss Pontius led in prayer.

Plans were made and committees appointed for a halloween party, October 26, the place to be announced later. It was also decided that the society would attend the Union Church services at Ted Lewis park next Sunday, in a body.

For the program readings were given by Maxine Poling, Mary Ann Drake, Helen Dunkle and Lorna Holbrook. Games and contests arranged by Miss Arledge were enjoyed during the social hour. Miss Drake received the prize for the most depressing looking costume worn to the meeting. Refreshments were served.

NEWS Behind the NEWS By PAUL MALLON

what they are going to do. I would say:

"We bailed you out of the last war, and we will bail you out of this one. We want to. We cancelled the post-war rehabilitation debts of World War I and we will cancel these. But we are not fools. This is getting to be a permanent proposition. We can support our country but not yours also, indefinitely, under the most favorable circumstances and your planned attack upon the very American capitalism, which has furnished from its toil the money to save you twice, has created threatening unknown circumstances.

"This money is extracted painfully from our people. It represents sweat of their brow. Get your cards out of your hat and on the table, and we will work out something fair to both sides."

We lost our last victory not only at the peace table, as is generally known, but in the post-war financing, as is not generally known. Germany never paid a net cent of these reparations, which drew our pity to such an extent that we ultimately took the lead in their cancellation, considering them so heavy as to be an unjust barrier to peace. Churchill once produced in the house of commons the full figures on reparations paid by Germany as compared with Allied money borrowed (largely from the United States and Britain) by Germany. He showed they just about balance.

Germany took from us money in loans (which she never repaid) practically covering in full what she paid France. Actually then our people, our taxpayers, paid the reparations which we so pitied Germany for bearing. And we do not even yet generally realize the trick Germany played upon us, making us Allies assume her whole burden and enabling her to rearm swifter for the second war against us.

We can lose this victory the same way. More, we can utterly destroy ourselves, and our way of life, by falling into these foolish financial pitfalls, with which we are being presented.

CARDS AND NATS KEEP PENNANT HOPES ALIVE

Tigers And Cubs Beaten
As Second Placers
Drive Toward Top

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Cardinals and Washington Senators, banking on parallel miracles to pull them through, prolonged the pennant suspense in the major league stretch drives today after knocking off the leading Cubs and Tigers.

For both the Cards and Nats to come through when the mathematics books are stacked against them would be lightning striking twice in almost the same place. There was no convincing the cocky crews on either club that it couldn't be done.

The rising Red Birds were two games behind with 10 left to play and the Senators were a game and a half in arrears with only five contests left in which to make up the difference.

The Tigers must take on the Cleveland Indians and the brilliant Bobby Feller while the Senators are idle today and the Cubs, one down already in their three game set at St. Louis, play the Cards again tonight.

The Cardinals, who have refused to be awed by the lofty position of the Cubs, beat them for the 14th time in 18 games last night, coming from behind with a 3 to 2 triumph for Charley (Red) Barrett.

The victory was number 22 of the season for "Chuckin' Charley" his fourth without a defeat against the Cubs. Chicago scored two runs in the first and went at it as if they intended to make a rout of the game.

After that, Barrett had the Cards eating out of his right hand. He gave up only five more hits, none dangerous. The Cards got back one run in their half of the first when Johnny Hopp doubled and came home on George Kurovski's single. The "clutch hitting" Kurovski also drove in the other two runs in the fifth when he got a bounding single with the bases loaded.

The Senators, playing in a morass of mud at Washington, dubbed the Tigers, 12 to 5. Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who had beaten them in one game of the series and had stopped them cold in the last inning of another, was tired and ineffective. He failed to last the first inning when the Nats scored four times. Before the game was over, five more Tiger hurriers had gone through the mill. The Senators fattened their averages with 16 hits.

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, who relieved Walter Masterson was the winner. It was his 17th triumph.

In the only other major league games, the Reds and Braves split at Cincinnati. Boston won the first, 3 to 1 in 11 innings. Rookie Ed Wright outpitched Rookie Earl Harritt, although each permitted only four hits. The Reds won the second game, 6 to 2. Hank Sauer hit two homers after getting one

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

what they are going to do. I would say:

"We bailed you out of the last war, and we will bail you out of this one. We want to. We cancelled the post-war rehabilitation debts of World War I and we will cancel these. But we are not fools. This is getting to be a permanent proposition. We can support our country but not yours also, indefinitely, under the most favorable circumstances and your planned attack upon the very American capitalism, which has furnished from its toil the money to save you twice, has created threatening unknown circumstances.

"This money is extracted painfully from our people. It represents sweat of their brow. Get your cards out of your hat and on the table, and we will work out something fair to both sides."

We lost our last victory not only at the peace table, as is generally known, but in the post-war financing, as is not generally known. Germany never paid a net cent of these reparations, which drew our pity to such an extent that we ultimately took the lead in their cancellation, considering them so heavy as to be an unjust barrier to peace. Churchill once produced in the house of commons the full figures on reparations paid by Germany as compared with Allied money borrowed (largely from the United States and Britain) by Germany. He showed they just about balance.

Germany took from us money in loans (which she never repaid) practically covering in full what she paid France. Actually then our people, our taxpayers, paid the reparations which we so pitied Germany for bearing. And we do not even yet generally realize the trick Germany played upon us, making us Allies assume her whole burden and enabling her to rearm swifter for the second war against us.

We can lose this victory the same way. More, we can utterly destroy ourselves, and our way of life, by falling into these foolish financial pitfalls, with which we are being presented.

CARDS AND NATS KEEP PENNANT HOPES ALIVE

Tigers And Cubs Beaten As Second Placers Drive Toward Top

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Cardinals and Washington Senators, banking on parallel miracles to pull them through, prolonged the pennant suspense in the major league stretch drives today after knocking off the leading Cubs and Tigers.

For both the Cards and Nats to come through when the mathematics books are stacked against them would be lightning striking twice in almost the same place. There was no convincing the cocky crews on either club that it couldn't be done.

The rising Red Birds were two games behind with 10 left to play and the Senators were a game and a half in arrears with only five contests left in which to make up the difference.

The Tigers must take on the Cleveland Indians and the brilliant Bobby Feller while the Senators are idle today and the Cubs, one down already in their three game set at St. Louis, play the Cards again tonight.

The Cardinals, who have refused to be awed by the lofty position of the Cubs, beat them for the 14th time in 18 games last night, coming from behind with a 3 to 2 triumph for Charley (Red) Barrett.

The victory was number 22 of the season for "Chuckin' Charley" his fourth without a defeat against the Cubs. Chicago scored two runs in the first and went at it as if they intended to make a rout of the game.

After that, Barrett had the Cubs eating out of his big right hand. He gave up only five more hits, none dangerous. The Cards got back one run in their half of the first when Johnny Hopp doubled and came home on George Kuroski's single. The "clutch hitting" Kuroski also drove in the other two runs in the fifth when he got a bounding single with the bases loaded.

The Senators, playing in a morass of mud at Washington, drubbed the Tigers, 12 to 5. Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who had beaten them in one game of the series and had stopped them cold in the last inning of another, was tired and ineffective. He failed to last the first inning when the Nats scored four times. Before the game was over, five more Tiger hurriers had gone through the mill. The Senators fattened their averages with 16 hits.

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, who relieved Walter Masterson was the winner. It was his 17th triumph.

In the only other major league games, the Reds and Braves split at Cincinnati. Boston won the first, 3 to 1 in 11 innings. Rookie Ed Wright outpitched Rookie Earl Harritt, although each permitted only four hits. The Reds won the second game, 6 to 2. Hank Sauer hit two homers after getting one in the first game to pace the winning attack.

The St. Louis at New York double header was postponed and the Cleveland at Philadelphia twin bill cancelled in the American.

ONE QUESTION—64 BUCKS

A $64 question without any preliminaries was presented to a sergeant, appearing on "Take It Or Leave It" Sunday. Eddie Cantor, guest master of ceremonies, told the soldier, "You know all these answers anyhow, so there's no use wasting your time. I'll ask you one question, and if you give me the right answer, you'll get $64 right away, instead of having to go through the whole category." The soldier knew the answer.

Councilmen Study Plan To Annex 3 1/2 Acres; One Ordinance Is Read

Only one ordinance was read, but discussion at the City Council meeting Tuesday night touched on a great variety of subjects including helicopter service for Circleville, a new fire alarm system, and extension of water lines.

A letter requesting moral support for a proposed helicopter line from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati with a stopover in Circleville to be operated by the Red Star Bus Lines, was read and accepted. It is proposed that the helicopters land near the central part of town.

Councilman George Crites brought up the matter of the city's need for a new fire alarm system, asserting that the present antiquated system of boxes was inadequate and unreliable, necessitating a request by the fire department that residents report fires by telephone whenever possible.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise reported that a pre-war estimate of the cost to the city of a renovated system of fire alarms would be $3,000, explaining that the cost might run a little higher now. No immediate action was taken.

One ordinance, calling for a week's vacation with pay for city service employees of one year or more, received its first reading. Councilman Crites gave the report of the finance committee and the August report on Berger hospital.

The Rev. E. A. Keaton of the Mount of Praise asked council for a recommendation to the water company for placing fire hydrants on the church property. City Solicitor Joe Adkins explained that this was a matter entirely between the water company and the Mount of Praise organization.

Rev. Keaton also asked that three and one-half acres of land east of the camp, recently purchased, be incorporated into the city limits as the rest of the camp now is. Solicitor Adkins outlined the legal procedure to be followed in the annexation of any property to the city.

Requests by several persons for water line extensions were referred to the service committee for investigation.

Guy Campbell reported that the moving of parking space of taxi cabs in front of his printing office had failed to improve a situation which he called a "nuisance." This matter, after lengthy discussion, was referred to the city taxi cab commission, composed of the mayor, safety director, and chief of police.

Councilman Ray Cook, reporting for the safety committee, said that Columbus had been contacted concerning mutual fire protection.

Solicitor Adkins said that the cost of an agreement with Columbus was prohibitive and suggested that the city contact Chillicothe, Lancaster, and Washington C. H. about mutual fire protection. These cities have cooperated closely with Circleville in the past in fire protection, he said.

There was some discussion of unsanitary conditions said to prevail at the "Nation House" on West Ohio street.

The safety committee reported that nothing could be done about complaints received concerning a building at Pickaway and Mound streets since the building was neither a fire nor a health hazard.

Uppsala university, in the ancient capital of Sweden, was founded in 1477.

The ordinance is effective for only one year and the city would continue on time one hour slower than the Eastern war time now in effect next Summer, unless a new ordinance is passed later.

The calf with a price on her head

YOU don't have to be a cattle man to know that the name of a good strain can mean a lot in a calf.

Take the name "Guernsey," for example. A calf that carries that name can command respect. For over the years, cattle men have come to know pretty well what a Guernsey's worth—and what to expect of one.

Good trademarks and trade names command respect for merchandise, too. For they tell you exactly who stands behind the product—and what you can expect from it.

That's why, over the years, folks have put a lot of stock in familiar names. Trusted names. Trade names. Names they know they can depend on.

You see it every day in stores. How much less "selling" it takes to sell you on a product that carries a well-known brand name...and how many times a good name brings you back for other branded items. So put your trust in trade names—they speak honestly for the product.
